

Telstra Privacy Statement

November 2025

Our commitment

Privacy matters to us and we know it matters to you. We are committed to protecting your privacy, keeping your personal information safe and ensuring the security of your data.

Our Privacy Statement

This Privacy Statement applies to Telstra Group Limited and all its Australian businesses, including Telstra Energy, Belong and Boost Mobile (collectively 'we', 'us' or 'our' in this Privacy Statement) but excluding Telstra Health, Telstra Foundation, Telstra Super, and other Telstra businesses that have their own privacy policies. We have identified where parts of this Privacy Statement also apply when you use specific products and services.

This Privacy Statement explains how we collect, store, use and share your personal information. For information about how we manage your credit-related information, please refer to our Credit Reporting Policy, available at telstra.com.au/privacy/credit.

For further details about how Telstra handles information please visit Your Information.

This Privacy Statement came into effect on 28 November 2025. We may need to update it over time but if we do, we will post the updated version on our website at telstra.com.au/privacy.

For information on how we process personal information relating to our international businesses, please refer to our International Privacy Statement which can be found on our website at telstra.com.au/privacy.

What personal information do we collect?

We collect different kinds of personal information about you. It's information we need in order to provide our products and services or do business with you. The types of information we collect depends on which products and services you use, how you use them, and our relationship with you.

Below are the main types of personal information we may collect:

- Identity information

This is information we need to make sure you are who you say you are. Verifying your identity allows us to provide you with our products and services, and also communicate with you about the products and services you use.

This information often includes your name, date of birth, contact details, proof of identity documents, property information (for example, rental lease and utility statements), Telstra PIN, payment information and whether you are a customer of one of our trusted partners.

- Financial information

We may collect your employment, financial and credit information, like your employment and income details, payment history, credit history and service history.

For more details on how we manage your credit information, check out our Credit Reporting Policy. You can find it on our website at telstra.com.au/privacy/credit.

- Sensitive personal information

We will only collect your sensitive information if it's relevant to the products or services we provide you. In Australia, sensitive information is specifically defined in the Privacy Act, and covers things like biometric, ethnic origin and health information. For example, we may need to collect:

- Limited health information, for example to work out if you're eligible to be a Priority Assistance telecommunications customer, or if you're an energy customer on life support.
- Biometric information like your voice patterns, for example to verify your identity or detect fraud.

Except in situations where we are legally permitted or required to do so, we will always ask for your consent before we collect or use your sensitive information.

- Concession details

If you're a concession customer, we may collect information about the concessions you're entitled to. For example, if you're claiming a pensioner discount we'll need your Centrelink Customer Reference Number (CRN).

- Information to protect against fraud, crime or misconduct

This includes different kinds of information we collect to protect either you or a third party, such as the time and date of a transaction made with a bank, retailer or other trusted partner. We sometimes need to compare this against Telstra service or account activity when we're identifying and helping prevent identity theft, unauthorised transactions, or other fraudulent activities.

- On-site information

This is information we collect when you visit a Telstra store or premises. For example, via CCTV or as a written report. This sort of information helps us protect our staff and customers, and is important for preventing fraud, crime and misconduct. We may also collect information about how you interact with in-store services so we can improve customer experiences.

- Your activity on our website, systems and applications

This includes information collected via cookies and other technologies as well as information collected during network fault finding and diagnostic testing activities. For more information about the types of cookies that Telstra uses, and how you can manage your settings, please visit Managing your cookies.

Other information we may collect

Depending on the Telstra products and services you use, we may also collect:

Telecommunications & associated products and services

- Information about products and services you have with us

This includes technical information about your devices such as:

- Your hardware model
- Operating system version
- The serial number of your devices
- The settings on your devices
- Our network performance
- How you use our networks.

- Information about how you use our products and services

This includes:

- Your network usage, for example the volume, time and duration of calls and SMS messages, along with information about the operation of the equipment, services and applications you use on our networks
- How you use our services to access the internet, for example websites you visit
- Your location, or the location of your devices
- Usage logs, communications content and call recordings that identify users only if enabled or requested as part of a product or service, for example Telstra's security monitoring and voice solutions, or if allowed by law.

Energy products and services

- Information about your energy usage

- Information relating to your energy meter and property

This includes things like:

- Your national metering identifier (NMI) which helps us identify your meter
- Information about the location of your meter.

Providing information on behalf of others

Sometimes you may need to provide personal and/or sensitive information about other individuals to us, for example your authorised representatives, or when someone at your property requires life support equipment or Priority Assist. In those cases, it's your responsibility to tell those individuals you're giving us their personal information and also to tell them about this Privacy Statement. We rely on you to do this.

Stay privacy smart whenever you're online

It's important to note that our products, services and website often contain links to other websites or platforms operated by third parties. These third parties do not need to comply with our Privacy Statement.

We recommend checking the privacy policy of the site or platform you're dealing with to understand how they handle personal information. Their privacy practices and privacy policies may be very different to ours.

How do we collect your personal information?

There are three main ways we collect your personal information:

1. You give it to us

This might happen during any interaction you have with us or one of our trusted partners and includes anyone acting on your behalf. It covers a wide range of activities where you might give us information about yourself, for example when you set up an account, fill out a form on our website, chat with us online or over the phone, use one of our products or services, or contact us with a question or complaint.

2. We collect it ourselves

This is information we collect about you when you interact with us, our network, product or services in some way. We might do this when you visit our website (including via cookies and other technologies) or use our products and services, including communicating with our call centres and participating in Telstra loyalty programs. We may also collect information about you when visit a Telstra store or premises or create or infer information about you using information we hold.

3. We get it from other sources

These may include organisations like regulators, or sources like marketing mailing lists or commercially available information sources that contain personal, identity, geographic or demographic information. It may include information that's publicly available, like public posts on social networking sites you've used to interact with us. We may also collect information about you from our related entities, business and commercial partners, along with our service providers, for example identity and fraud checking services we use.

Depending on which of our products and services you use, or how you use our network, we may also collect your personal information from other participants in the telecommunications and energy sectors. In the telecommunications sector, this might include organisations that use the Telstra network, such as our wholesale customers. In the energy sector, it could be energy distributors, other retailers and metering service providers.

Don't want to share your information? We get it

Personal information is about you, and in some situations, you might not want to provide us with particular details. If that's the case, keep in mind that we may not be able to provide you with the products or services you need.

How do we use your personal information?

We use your personal information in a variety of ways:

- To provide products and services to you

We may use your personal information to provide products and services to you and conduct our business.

- To verify your identity

We may use your personal information to verify your identity both before and during the time we provide our products and services to you. We sometimes use identity verification services that compare the personal information on your identity documents (such as passport, drivers' licence and Medicare card) with the document issuer or official record holder via third party systems. The Government IDMatch website provides more information about the operation and management of these identity verification services. For more information on how we use these services, please visit Identity Verification Services Information.

- Administration

This includes many of the ordinary activities necessary to run our business. We may use your personal information to help us manage the products and services we provide to you, deal with enquiries and complaints and maintain and update our records.

For example, if you contact us with a question about your account, we'll need to verify your identity first to protect against fraud and will use your personal information to do that.

We also use your information for charging and billing and to identify breaches of our terms and conditions of service.

- Network and security monitoring

We undertake a range of network and security monitoring activities, including identifying and blocking malicious content. For example, SMS and messages to your Telstra email we identify as scam or associated with cybercrime. We also monitor our Domain Name Servers (DNS) for known malicious domains which can lead to the downloading of malicious software onto devices.

Where Telstra's DNS services are used to connect to known malicious domains, we may use your personal information to determine whether you might be impacted. If so, we may take action to block malicious activity and/or notify you so that you can take action to protect yourself.

- Identifying fraud, crime and misconduct

We may use your personal information to identify and help prevent identity theft, unauthorised transactions or other fraudulent activities. These activities may happen either on or off our networks, for example fraudulent transactions with banks, retailers and other trusted partners. Personal information captured within our stores or premises, including via CCTV, may also be used to manage fraud, crime, and misconduct.

- Communicating with you

Businesses need to be able to communicate with their customers, and we're no different. We may use phone, email, SMS, postal mail, chat functions and social media to communicate with you. We may also provide you with personalised experiences within search engines and web pages you visit.

- Improvement, development and analysis

We are continually working to maintain and improve our products, services and processes and to develop new ones, and we may use your personal information to help us do this. For example, when we're analysing network use, quality, and performance, when we're operating, maintaining, developing, testing and upgrading our products, systems and infrastructure, or when we're developing, improving and using AI systems. For more information on how we use AI, please visit telstra.com.au/ai.

We also use analysis to obtain high level insights into things like usage and location patterns or trends, network performance, demographic trends, and other types of behavioural data. This information is generally aggregated or de-identified when we analyse it, which means the information isn't personal information. We may share these insights with trusted partners.

In some cases, we may create or share insights based on personal information, but if we do it's always in accordance with our privacy obligations. We may also combine information we hold about you with information from one of our partners' services to improve our credit assessment, debt recovery and other processes.

- Direct marketing

We want to make sure you hear about products, services or special offers from us (or one of our entities) that you might find useful or interesting. We or our trusted partners may use the personal information we collect and hold about you to market and promote products, services and special offers directly to you, including as part of Telstra's loyalty programs.

We may also contact you with information about products, services and offers provided by our trusted partners. In some cases, this marketing activity can continue after you have stopped using our products or services (including Telstra's loyalty programs), unless you opt out.

You have the right to opt out of marketing communication from us

If you don't want your personal information to be used for marketing, you can simply opt out by following the unsubscribe instructions in any of our marketing communications. Below are other ways that you can update your marketing preferences:

- Telstra (including Telstra Energy) customers can log into My Telstra online at my.telstra.com.au or via the My Telstra app, or call us on 1800 039 059.
- Belong customers can visit belong.com.au/privacy.
- Boost Mobile customers can message 'STOP' to 0417 719 037 to unsubscribe from SMS marketing.
- Australian Telstra Enterprise customers can visit telstra.com/enterprise/unsubscribe.

Keep in mind that when you opt out of marketing messages, we will still send you important messages related to the operation of your account, for example administration or safety messages.

- Compliance

There are certain circumstances where we are required or allowed to collect or use your personal information, including, but not limited to those described below. Telecommunications compliance is different to energy compliance, so we've included a different section for each.

Telecommunications & associated products and services

We may collect or use your personal information:

- As required or permitted by telecommunications laws and industry codes and standards legislation, including the Telecommunications Act 1997 (Cth) and the Telecommunications (Interception and Access) Act 1979 (Cth) (which includes data retention provisions)

- To produce and distribute an alphabetical public number directory (known as the White Pages) in compliance with our Carrier Licence Conditions. Please note, if you've requested an unlisted number your number will not be published in the White Pages
- To provide operator and directory assistance services to end users of the services in compliance with our Carrier Licence Conditions
- When we need to do identity checks for pre-paid public mobile telecommunications services under the Telecommunications (Service Provider - Identity Checks for Prepaid Mobile Carriage Services) Determination 2017
- When we need to verify your identity for certain transactions in accordance with the Telecommunications Service Provider (Customer Identity Authentication) Determination 2022
- To provide emergency call service centres and the relevant emergency services organisations with information in relation to calls to the emergency call service number (000 and 112) (e.g., the most precise mobile location information we can access about the relevant device when it is used to call the emergency call service number under the Telecommunications (Emergency Call Service) Determination 2019)
- To prevent or lessen threats to a person's life or health under the Telecommunications Act 1997 (Cth) or Telstra's Carrier Licence Conditions.

Energy products and services

We may collect or use your personal information:

- As required or permitted by energy sector legislation (e.g., the National Energy Retail Law and National Energy Retail Rules, Energy Retail Code of Practice) or relevant industry procedures to supply and service you with energy.

How do we safeguard your personal information?

Keeping your personal information safe is vital for our business, and information security is a priority for the products and services we offer. Our approach is based on innovation and continuous improvement, where we anticipate threats instead of simply responding to them.

We use a combination of advanced technical solutions, security controls and internal processes to help us protect your personal information and our network from unauthorised access and disclosure.

We store your information securely

We may store your personal information securely in hard copy or electronic format and keep it in storage facilities that we own and operate ourselves or that are owned and operated by our service providers.

We limit the amount of information we keep

We aim to ensure that personal information is kept as current as possible, and that irrelevant or excessive data is destroyed or de-identified as soon as reasonably possible.

Telstra is subject to a number of legislative requirements to retain information for different periods of time. When personal information is not, or is no longer, subject to these legislative retention requirements, and no longer required for a legitimate business reason, we take reasonable steps to destroy or de-identify it.

Who do we share your personal information with?

We work with a range of external suppliers, agents, partners, and contractors who help us with our business processes and/or provide you with products and services on our behalf. We may share your personal information with these parties, who provide the following kinds of services:

- Providing, managing or administering our products or services, including customer enquiries and support services
- Installation, maintenance and repair services
- Mailing operations, billing and debt-recovery functions
- Information technology and network services
- Development of our credit assessment and credit worthiness rating system
- Fraud, crime or misconduct identification, investigation and prevention services
- Market research, marketing and telemarketing services
- Development, analysis and business intelligence functions.

We may also share your personal information with other parties, including:

- Your authorised representatives or advisers
- Our dealers, our related entities or our business or commercial partners and other businesses we work with
- Parties that assist us with fraud and identity checking including financial institutions and the document issuer or official record holder
- Other third parties for the purpose of helping to protect either you or the third party against fraud, crime or misconduct. This includes situations like assisting to prevent identity theft, unauthorised transactions or fraudulent activities either on or off our networks. It may also include the provision of fraud protection or authentication services to third parties, for example banks, retailers, or other trusted partners. For more information on how we share your information for these purposes, please visit Fraud and scam prevention
- Third party service providers that you have a relationship with for customer experience and feature improvements (with your consent, where required)

- Law enforcement and national security agencies, and other government and regulatory authorities as required or permitted by law, including for the purpose of responding to complaints
- Other parties that assist us in managing or developing our business and corporate strategies and functions, including providers of professional services that support our corporate risk or funding functions
- Financiers, investors or other participants and parties (such as service providers and ratings agencies) and advisers involved in securitisation or other financing arrangements
- Other parties for the purpose of facilitating or implementing a transfer or sale of all or part of our assets or business
- Other parties as required or permitted by law

Depending on the type of Telstra products and services you use, we may also disclose your personal information to the following other parties:

Telecommunications & associated products and services

- Other telecommunications and information service providers, for example when you're porting a service, or our wholesale and other customers who provide you with products or services, or help you to get them
- The manager of the Integrated Public Number Database (IPND) and other organisations as required or permitted by law (see acma.gov.au for more information)
- Our contractor, Thryv Australia (formerly known as Sensis), to enable us to meet our Carrier Licence Conditions to produce and distribute an alphabetical public number directory, known as the White Pages. Please note, if you've requested for your number to be unlisted it will not be published in the White Pages
- Government agencies in relation to the connection of new services to the National Broadband Network (NBN)
- Government agencies responsible for an emergency alert service. We may need to provide your information in response to a request by those agencies.

Energy products and services

- Energy market participants and energy service providers including energy distributors, other energy retailers, and service providers who provide services relating to your energy supply, for example metering related services
- Australian Energy Market Operator and the relevant Energy Ombudsman
- State and federal government agencies, including those responsible for administering concession entitlements.

We may share your information outside Australia

In some cases, we may need to share your personal information with organisations or other Telstra Group entities that are located outside of Australia, for example in the following countries and regions:

Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, the European Union, Hong Kong, India, Israel, Japan, Malaysia, Moldova, New Zealand, Norway, Philippines, Singapore, South Africa, South Korea, Sri Lanka, Taiwan, the UAE, United Kingdom, the United States of America and Vietnam.

Whenever we do this, we require these parties to take appropriate measures to protect your information and restrict how they can use it.

How can you access or correct your personal information?

It's important that your personal information is kept accurate, up-to-date and complete. If any of your details change, for example if you move house or change your name, we've made it straightforward to update your information.

You have the right to request a copy of the personal information we hold about you. There's no charge to submit a request or correct your personal information, however we may charge an administrative fee for providing access to your personal information at your request.

Need to update or access your personal information?

Follow the directions below:

- For Telstra (including Telstra Energy and Boost Mobile), please visit Access to personal information or contact us using the details in the 'how can you contact us?' section below. You can also update and access some personal information directly from your My Telstra account.
- For Belong, contact us at privacy@belong.com.au. You can also update and access some personal information directly from your Belong account.

How can you make a privacy complaint?

Your privacy matters, and we want to get it right. If you believe we've missed the mark, you can use our contact details as outlined below to notify us of any privacy complaints you have against us.

We will acknowledge your complaint in writing as soon as possible and will give you an estimated timeframe for when we will respond.

While we hope to be able to resolve any complaints you have, you can also lodge a complaint with any of the following regulators:

Telecommunications & associated products and services

- Telecommunications Industry Ombudsman (tio.com.au)

Energy products and services

- (NSW) Energy and Water Ombudsman of New South Wales (ewon.com.au)
- (Victoria) Energy and Water Ombudsman of Victoria (ewov.com.au)
- (Queensland) Energy and Water Ombudsman of Queensland (ewoq.com.au)
- (South Australia) Energy and Water Ombudsman (SA) (ewosa.com.au)

If your complaint cannot be resolved, you can also contact the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner (oaic.gov.au).

How can you contact us?

If you have any questions about our Privacy Statement or the way we manage your personal information, or you'd like a copy of this Privacy Statement sent to you (including in Braille), please call us on 1800 039 059 or email privacy@online.telstra.com.au.

You can also download a print-friendly PDF of this statement on our website at telstra.com.au/privacy.

